Didier Levallet, previously the director of the French National Jazz Orchestra, has managed to surround himself with serious players such as the three famous wind-instrumentalists Céline Bonacina and saxophone, Airelle Besson and trumpet, Sylvaine Héлары and flutes. Together with François Laizeau on the drums they are truly unbeatable. The quintet has been highly praised by the press. "Sheer diamond" - Jazz News. " tones this rich produced with trumpet, baritone saxophone and flutes, played by such great talent would make monks dance". "Didier Levallet should be very happy indeed. By inviting faithful friend François Laizeau he has managed to create a solid team of players to interpret compositions which leave great latitude to improvisation. These are attributes greatly appreciated by an enthusiastic public ".T.Giard, Culture Jazz on Jazz sous les Pommiers, May 2014.

Tribute to Duke Ellington
Saturday 26 July
at 21h

Salle Lucien Sallée

The eight artists of the Black Label Swingtet present a homage to Duke Ellington and take us back to one of the richest and most heart-warming times in the history of jazz, the Swing Era, with its incredible fusion of styles. In addition to the prestigious sounds of Duke Ellington, Count Basie, George Gershwin and Cole Porter, the Swingtet presents Bossa Nova, Biguines from the Antilles, or Blues. Patricia's deep and slightly husky voice is surrounded by original orchestrations and the rich tones of the brass instruments.

Sunday 27 July at 21h

Raphaël Imbert, saxophone
Anne Pacey, drums
Simon Sieger, trompette, accd, piano
Thomas Weirich, guitar
Pierre Fenichel, double bass

Named by the press as one of the most outrageously gifted musicians of his generation, Raphael Imbert follows his own path in the large family of jazz with his improvisations and arrangements as well as being a demanding teacher. One of his favourite domains is the quest for spirituality in jazz. On this subject he has published a greatly acclaimed work entitled "Jazz Suprême, Initiés, Mystiques et Prophètes" which the Canard Enchaîné has described as a definite and fascinating book. On stage he is accompanied by a rarity, a female drummer, Anne Pacey.
